PIRAAAAARTES

“Ol’ Chumbucket” Baur and “Cap’n Slappy Summers were toiling at the racquetball court, working to get back into shape. And quick as the first “arrrr” of anguish calmed the sense of pain from something that was stretched too hard, the fun of talking pirate lingo became apparent. International Talk Like a Pirate Day -- celebrated annually on September 19th -- is, so far as they know, the first holiday that originated as a sports injury.

“But the point is, this is a great idea, and you, me bucko should be part of it. ... You HAVE the buckles, darn it: Don’t be afraid to swash them! Let’s make this into a grass-roots movement that sweeps the nation.”

- Dave Berry

WALKING THE PLANK

Like the free spirited guys they are, John Baur and Mark Summers teach you how to enhance your look with a puffy shirt and a colorful sash, adopt a buccaneer’s fearful sounding name and wield your cutlass (no, not the car!) without catching it in the rigging! But if you can’t spot the difference between “ballast” and “broadside,” then you need to work on your PIRATTITUDE! PIRATTITUDE: So You Wanna Be a Pirate? Here’s How! is the perfect way of fixing this problem.

Talking like a pirate is probably one of the only times its okay to be intentional with your sassy attitude. The guys share the spirit of pirate talk fun with an audience , whether comprised of old sea dogs or hopeless landlubbers. By the time you’re finished, you’ll swagger like Blackbeard himself!
