

“We had a saying in the Peace Corps: ‘If you go to Latin America, you’ll come back fomenting revolution; if you go to Asia, you’ll come back seeking enlightenment; and if you go to Africa, you’ll come back laughing.’ Well, I’ve gone to all three!”

WITH THE BEST OF INTENTIONS

At an early age, Eve Brown-Waite entertained notions of joining the Peace Corps and making a difference. With college behind her and her future in limbo, she falls for her recruiter, John, across a Peace Corps recruitment table at the State University of New York at Albany. While working with homeless children in South America, Eve discovers that there are ways in which America lags behind “third world countries.” She tackles marriage, friendships, and pregnancy, and finds her own place in Uganda with hilarious and true life adventure tales that humanize the experience of an American abroad trying her best to make a difference. First Comes Love, Then Comes Malaria is set to publish in April, 2009.

Equal parts Che Guevara, Mother Theresa and Erma Bombeck, Eve will touch audiences with stories of her work in the trenches of Ecuador and Uganda. She’ll motivate audiences with tales of social action, and she’ll have them laughing until coffee comes squirting out of their noses. Author, world traveler, and itinerant do-gooder, Eve Brown-Waite will help you find – and buff shine – your own inner Light in this sometimes dark world.

“A must, must, must read. You will laugh, laugh, laugh at this account of how you can do good and laugh away your stress all at the same time.”

ALL ABOUT EVE

Eve Brown-Waite was a finalist for both an Iowa Review Award and a Glimmer Train Award, and the first runner up for the 2008 New Millennium Writings Award for stories she wrote about her time abroad. She holds a BA in Political Science, an MPH in Community Health Education, and also attended Meadville/Lombard Theological School. Brown-Waite lives with her husband and two children in Massachusetts, although if she has anything to say about it, she won’t be there for long.
